Digital GADGETS & Photos

Most cameras don't take pictures at all, but leave that up to the photographer.

2: Rule of THIRDS

4: Depth of Field

The depth of field does not abruptly change from sharp to unsharp, but instead occurs as a gradual transition. In fact, everything immediately in front of or in back of the focusing distance begins to lose sharpness — even if this is not perceived by our eyes or by the resolution of the camera.

4: Depth of Field

The best way to learn how to control DOF is to set your camera to aperture priority mode (if it has it) and go take some pictures.

4: Depth of Field

As you can see, at a large aperture of  $f/2.4$  only the first card is in focus, while at  $f/8$  the middle card is sharp and the distant card is almost sharp. Click on the image for a larger version.

Sharpen/Blur brush

Use a brush to non-destructively blur or sharpen a specific area of your images. Choose your brush size and the amount of feathering, and add a linear or radial gradient to help you achieve exactly the look you want.

16: SmartPhones

Keep in mind that most smartphones take the picture when you release your finger from the shutter--not when you first touch it. So hold your finger in place, then let go right when you want to shoot.

Clean your screen and camera lens with distilled water applied with a cotton bud. Distilled water is chemical free, unlike tap water, so it won't leave an unsightly film over your lens when it dries.

Leaning against a wall or tree will help reduce your trembles. Alternatively, you could balance your phone against a handy object like your handbag or a drinking glass to take a crisper photo.
